

Cops of America: Attention

Would Richard Nixon Die for You?

Eldridge Cleaver

1970

“Both police and armed forces follow orders. Orders. Orders flow from the top down. Up there, behind closed doors, in antechambers, in conference rooms, gavels bang on tables, the tinkling of silver decanters can be heard as ice water is poured by well-fed, conservatively dressed men in horn-rimmed glasses, fashionably dressed American widows with rejuvenated faces and tinted hair, the air permeated with the square humor of Bob Hope jokes. Here all the talking is done, all the thinking, all the deciding.”

—Eldridge Cleaver, Soul on Ice

WOULD RICHARD NIXON DIE FOR YOU ?

"Both police and armed forces follow orders. Orders. Orders flow from the top down. Up there, behind closed doors, in antechambers, in conference rooms, gifts hang on tables, the tinkling of silver decanters can be heard as low-water is poured by well-fed, conservatively dressed men in hornrimmed glasses, fashionably dressed American women with rejuvenated faces and tinted hair, the air permeated with the square humor of Bob Hope jokes. Here all the talking is done, all the thinking, all the deciding."
