Fifth Estate Collective

While pondering over the November 14, 1977 issue of Newsweek magazine, we came across mention of the ole Fifth Estate in their article "Businessmen and Terrorism;" a fine representation of that mystical horseshit that makes us want to bring it all up—"objective journalism."

How these seeping sacks of parrot droppings dare write such vacuous, pig-ignorant articles and pass them off as truth is beyond us. Why we wouldn't even spit on the rotting carcasses of these slithering slugs, for fear of offending our saliva!

Finally. All we can muster up against this affront to our decency is: Flattery will get you nowhere!

"In addition, domestic terrorists have been carrying on an active psy-war campaign against top executives. A year ago, a Detroit radical paper called The Fifth Estate ran a phony General Motors advertisement that, under the headline included pictures and maps (featuring arrows showing 'easy escape routes') that pinpointed the location of GM chairman Thomas A. Murphy's home. [See "Please...Do Not Kidnap These Men," FE #273, June 1976.] And in a recent edition of its irregular publication, The Urban Guerrilla, the NWLF listed the names and addresses of PG&E's chairman and president, along with pictures of their homes."

PLEASE DO NOT KIDNAP THESE MEN,

PLEASE.....

..... DO NOT KIDNAP THESE MEN !!!!!!!

Since General Motors reported a net profit of $90 million for the first quarter of 1970, our executives have been predictable targets for kidnapping by members of the criminal element and leftists.

The Central Executive Office of GM is composed of fourteen men, most of whom live in the Woodland Hills, Birmingham area. Each is a valuable and integral part of the executive team and would command a high ransom if abducted.

Therefore, the Corporation is asking this agency to assist in the event of discovery of any would-be kidnapers -- for the nation, for the sake of our Company -- do not kidnap them ever!!

Thomas A. Murphy (left), Chairman of the Board, and Edward J. Matheson (right), President, converse with each other in 1974 when Murphy took the helm of the Corporation.

Murphy's home, shown below, is located at 1550 Wiggins, Woodland Hills, in a cluster of private condominiums facing a private golf course in the Walnut South development just off Long Lake Road. (Please note: Also note easy entry into windows and porches.)
